Football in Chile

The Chilean national team finished third at the 1962 FIFA World Cup™, which was held on home soil. Since then, success has eluded this football-crazy country, with the third-place finish at the Olympic Men's Football Tournament Sydney 2000 the only notable exception. Players such as Zamorano, Salas and Margas (to name but three) have plied their trade in top European leagues. With regard to development work, Chile assumed a pioneering role in South America in 1960 when it opened the very first school for coaches. With its own headquarters, training centre, football institute and playing pitches, the national association has a very good football infrastructure in place.

The first Goal Project

For the first time, the Goal Programme is helping to invest systematically in the regional infrastructure of a country, namely Chile. Regional bodies and clubs were encouraged to submit projects as part of a competition and the ten best projects were then presented to the Goal Bureau, before being approved on 15 October 2003. Work concentrated on laying pitches, building a stand, installing floodlights and building changing rooms, which were inaugurated in November 2004. The following clubs were successful with their applications: Coquimbo Unido, Union La Calera, Union San Felipe, Santiago Wanderers Quintero, Palestino, ANFA and O'Higgins Rancagua. Money provided by the FIFA Financial Assistance Programme had previously been used to build a football institute with an artificial turf pitch in Santiago de Chile, which was inaugurated on 24 April 2001.

Second Goal project

The project approved by the Goal Bureau on 15 March is a continuation of the Chilean association's development of the regional infrastructure launched by the first project in autumn 2003. The items intended primarily to promote youth football are: 1) artificial turf pitch in Calama, 2) floodlights in Santiago, 3) dressing room in La Florida, 4) training centre in Viña del Mar, 5) offices in Valparaiso. Together with project 1, twelve provinces have now benefited from the Chilean youth development programme. The ambitious programme is being financed largely by the association's own resources with subsidies from the FIFA Goal and Financial Assistance Programme.

Women's football

When, in 1995, today's FIFA President said "The future of football is feminine", it was more than mere lip service. It reflected a strong belief in the huge potential that women's football has to develop. Ever since, FIFA has given targeted support for the efforts of associations who offer women the same opportunities to develop as male players. Launched in 1998, FIFA's Financial Assistance Programme (FAP) introduced a requirement in 2004 for the associations and confederations to invest at least 4% of their FAP funding into women's football. This threshold was increased to 10% in 2005. On top of this commitment, FIFA also promotes the women's game in more general ways by directly financing women's matches and organising competitions and symposiums. Thanks to its development programmes, FIFA is also playing an active role in the training of administrators, coaches, referees and sports doctors.
